

transformed living

W E E K F O U R

Pearl of Wisdom:

What goes up must come down.

In the same way, the more we allow our financial gifts to rise to the heavens through tithes and offerings, the more likely we are to see abundant rain.

No one likes to talk about money. And you don't like anyone telling you what to do with it, either. But what if someone gave you some hard-earned insight on a solid investment, one with out-of-this-world rewards? Would you jump at the opportunity?

This week, your daily readings in Treasures of the Transformed Life looked at financial gifts. Remember the illustration of the water cycle, in which the moisture gathers on the ground, evaporates into the heavens, and then returns to the earth as precipitation? How's the precipitation in your own life?

As usual, the pastor's message will cover a related topic to help you revisit, refresh, and renew what you've learned. But that's not all. Just like every Sunday, the offering plate will be passed. Will you look at it with new eyes?

The way we feel about money, if you remember, says a lot about our priorities. And if we hold it in a clenched fist, rather than on an outstretched palm, a funny thing happens. It becomes all we have. A hand that's tightly closed has no way to receive.

So what's your posture toward giving this week? How tightly closed is that fist? How open is that heart?

Coming up next week: This church wants YOU!

transformed living

W E E K F O U R

Pearl of Wisdom:

What goes up must come down.

In the same way, the more we allow our financial gifts to rise to the heavens through tithes and offerings, the more likely we are to see abundant rain.

No one likes to talk about money. And you don't like anyone telling you what to do with it, either. But what if someone gave you some hard-earned insight on a solid investment, one with out-of-this-world rewards? Would you jump at the opportunity?

This week, your daily readings in Treasures of the Transformed Life looked at financial gifts. Remember the illustration of the water cycle, in which the moisture gathers on the ground, evaporates into the heavens, and then returns to the earth as precipitation? How's the precipitation in your own life?

As usual, the pastor's message will cover a related topic to help you revisit, refresh, and renew what you've learned. But that's not all. Just like every Sunday, the offering plate will be passed. Will you look at it with new eyes?

The way we feel about money, if you remember, says a lot about our priorities. And if we hold it in a clenched fist, rather than on an outstretched palm, a funny thing happens. It becomes all we have. A hand that's tightly closed has no way to receive.

So what's your posture toward giving this week? How tightly closed is that fist? How open is that heart?

Coming up next week: This church wants YOU!